Maricopa

538 rock! Throw your old mano (hand grinding stone) away and get a new one," and then snap it out. The children were told that if they threw it away without saying anything, none would grow in its place.

Tongue-twisters and proverbs were unknown to the informants.

828 A brief discussion was held with Last Star on the subject of thinking. The Maricopa believed that one thinks with his heart. If they went on a visit, they said, "My heart began thinking of you, so I started off to see you." Last Star believes that he thinks with his heart, because "if a man is sick, his heart beats fast; if it stops, his arteries will not work. Some people now say that one thinks with his head, but my head feels to my hand only like a hard stone. It does not keep working; my heart does. The way my heart beats hard, it must be responsible." It would seem that he was identifying thought with the whole of his bodily states, physiological and emotional, and, I gathered from other observations, dreaming was considered part of this whole, that is, just one aspect which bodily states might take. "Thinking" was al,i'm, kĭln,iʊu'ck, or iwa'kĭln,iʊu'ck, "heart thinking."

DIVERSIONS

SMOKING

276 517 Smoking was an indulgence; its use but moderate. There was in addition considerable ceremonial usage, particularly on the part of shamans. With regard to everyday use, "they did not smoke all the time, but a little when at work, and when they gathered in the evening to converse." Tobacco was carried to the evening gatherings in the meeting house, where each man smoked privately. The chief, when calling them to the meeting, shouted out a warning to bring a sufficient supply for those who might come unprovided. Women hardly ever smoked.

276 782 Smoking was also in the nature of a prayer. "When I puff it out, I think of someone I want helped, and I pray that I may linger for some years more." When old Kutox did this, he said, he did not address any particular spirit, but was speaking to his "relatives." (The implication is obscure.)
